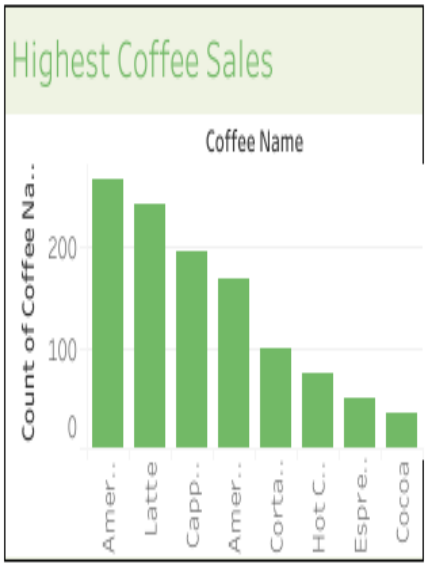
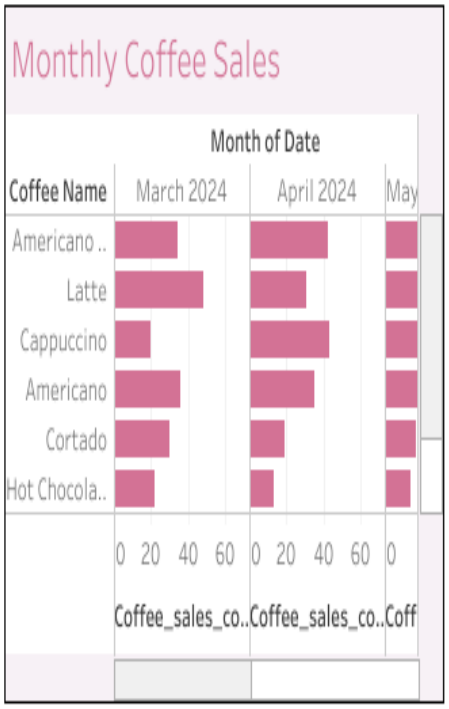
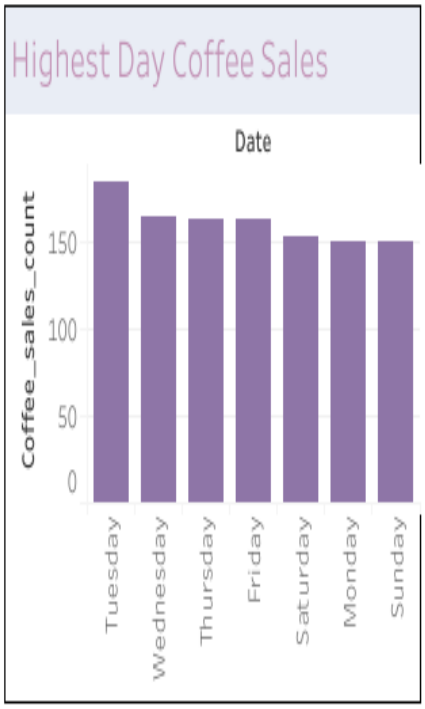
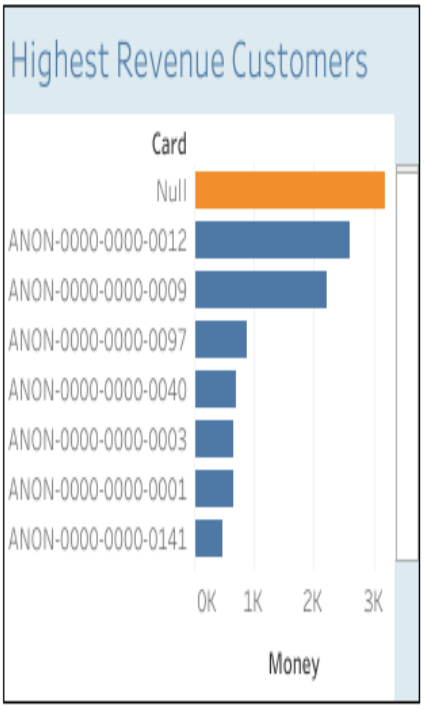
COFFEE SALES TREND ANALYSIS









COFFEE SALES TREND ANALYSIS

Storytelling Insights

1. Latte is the king of revenue, but Americano rules by popularity – indicating that smart pricing drives Latte's profitability.
2. Seasonality matters – sales peak in May–July, showing opportunities for seasonal promotions (cold brews, summer offers).
3. Coffee is a weekday ritual – strongest sales mid-week (esp. Tuesday), showing opportunities for weekday-focused campaigns.
4. Revenue is concentrated among a few customers – loyalty schemes, prepaid cards, or subscriptions could lock in these buyers.
5. Underperformers (Cortado, Cocoa, Espresso, Hot Chocolate) – may need repositioning, bundling, or removal if not strategic.

✨ Narrative Example for Stakeholders

"Our coffee shop thrives on a few core products – Latte and Americano are the backbone, with Cappuccino as a strong third. Interestingly, Americano sells the most cups, but Latte drives more revenue, highlighting the importance of pricing. Sales show seasonality, peaking in May–July, suggesting targeted summer campaigns can maximize profits. Coffee buying is strongly linked to weekday routines, particularly Tuesdays, making workday promotions highly effective. A small group of loyal customers generates a large share of revenue – focusing on loyalty programs can further strengthen this base. Finally, niche products like Hot Chocolate and Cortado underperform consistently, and we need to rethink their strategy."

COFFEE SALES TREND ANALYSIS